MURRAY COUNTY

School zone decision protested

By RACHEL BROWN
rachelbrown@daltoncitizen.com

CHATSWORTH — Tracy Bartley choked back tears as she begged Murray County school board members to reconsider their districting policies.

"This matters to us," she said at a Thursday evening board meeting. "We were told that our son ... would attend North Murray."

Several parents of students who attend Bagley Middle School told board members that the board promised them in 2007 that their children would go to North Murray High School when it opens in 2010.

However, many Bagley students

Whitfield County firefighters help extinguish a fire that burned a mobile home on Satcher Road Thursday. Two men were injured in the blaze that occurred around 7:30 a.m.

2 injured in trailer fire

Man sent to burn unit

By MARK MILLICAN
markmillican@daltoncitizen.com

Stephanie Schoates said she was asleep on the couch Thursday morning when the overwhelming smell of smoke woke her.

"I looked in the back where the wood stove was and the flames were almost to the ceiling," she said, describing the scene at 3219 Satcher Road near Plainview. "I looked back when I got next door and (the flames) were up in the trees."

Two men inside the trailer were taken by ambulance to Hamilton Medical Center. Thomas "Tommy" Vaughn was later sent to the Joseph M. Still Burn Center in Augusta where he was listed in critical condition, a spokeswoman said. David Vaughn was in fair condition at Hamilton, according to a spokeswoman there.

The trailer was one-half to three-quarters engulfed in flames when the first unit arrived, said Danny Roach, assistant chief with the Whitfield County Fire Department. The call came in at 7:37 a.m. The trailer is a total loss, Roach said.

Schoates said David Vaughn was already up trying to extinguish the blaze when she awoke.

"I woke (Tommy) up and called 911 from the bedroom," she said. Roach said it was his understanding 911 was called from a neighbor's house.

"We were going out the door and I don't know how he got burned," she said. "There was black smoke everywhere."

Neighbor Wayne McCurdy was alerted when he heard Schoates outside his door screaming, "Oh my God! Oh my God!"

"When I got there (to the fire) David was out in the woods without a shirt or shoes on," he said, shaking his head while pondering the 16 degree weather. "He'd been out there awhile and he was delirious. All of Tommy's hair was burned off and he was barely walking."

Fire trucks and ambulances arrived at the same time, he said.

Roach said six fire trucks from three stations and 35 personnel responded.

"I can't really say it was the wood stove (that started the fire)," he said. "At this point it's hard to determine because the structure was so completely burned. But we will continue to investigate a little longer."

3 finalists for Dalton fire chief work at department

By CHARLES OLIVER
charlesoliver@daltoncitizen.com

One of three veteran Dalton firefighters should be the department's next chief. The Public Safety Commission has named three finalists for the post:

■ Gary Baggett, 47, a battalion chief who has been with the Dalton Fire Department for 23 years.

■ Ronny Jones, 52, a lieutenant who has been with the department for 21 years.

■ Bruce Satterfield, 51, the deputy chief and current interim chief who has been with the department for 29 years.

Former chief Barry Gober announced his resignation, effective Nov. 14, in October. He was with the department more than 30 years, including more than eight as chief.

The city received 24 applications for the post, including six from within the department.

A committee comprised of PSC chairman Bill Weaver, PSC member Terry Mathis and City Council members Dick Lowrey and George Sadosuk went through the applications and interviewed six candidates, all from within the department.

"After going through the applications, looking at each one carefully, we decided that the candidates from within the department were equal to those who had applied from without," said Weaver.

He said that indicates the department is "very well staffed with good people who see it as a fine place to work and a fine place to be

Blue Star Mothers chapter forming in North Georgia

By RACHEL BROWN
rachelbrown@daltoncitizen.com

Janis Dearman doesn't know when or if her 22-year-old Army son will be sent to Iraq.

What she knows is that she plans to support him whenever he goes.

At one point fervently opposed to his enlistment in any branch of the military, Dearman now is forming a chapter of Blue Star Mothers of America to show her support for her son.

"I mainly just wanted Sam to know that I was behind him," she said.

Dearman, an East Brainerd, Tenn., resident who attends church in Dalton and works in Ringgold, said the closest chapter of Blue Star Mothers she found was in Knoxville, Tenn. The organization is a support and service group for

"Instead of building new city or county offices, why can't the trade center be used for city and county offices?"

"I agree on the spay and neuter program for the dogs."

"The trade center needs to be shut down."

"Why do we let foreigners run Whitfield County? They couldn't run things where they were and now they come here? They don't care about the community."

"A medal? Bush should get a trophy. After all, he's the worst president since Hoover."

"My son played sports at Eastbrook and we never lost to anyone from Tunnel Hill, even with their fancy gym."

"The general public was very opposed to building the trade center, for obvious reasons, the same as they are opposed now to building the new high school in a swamp."

"The Democrats don't mind raising taxes because they don't pay any."

"Just wondering what Kroger on West Walnut was thinking when they kicked out Blockbuster. They must not have realized that there is a Bi-Lo conveniently located next to the Blockbuster main store on East Walnut."

"How long are the American people going to let Obama and the criminals he's hired steal our money and ruin our country so brazenly?"

Editor's note: At least four years?

"If the politicians being appointed to the president's cabinet can't manage their own financial problems, how can they be expected to manage ours?"

the most religious often mistreat animals."

"The firemen who were arrested didn't deserve to be put on the front page."

"Does the Creative Arts Guild have security cameras?"

"That ferocious blizzard was so worth taking off work early (in such hard economic) times to bring our kids home to enjoy sunshine!"

"The Wall Street nuts claim if they don't pay the high bonuses their employees will go someplace else. I don't see that happening at this time when there are no jobs to go to. They would hang on just to have a job right now."

"Why do people not see the YIELD signs when turning onto I-75?"

"Anyone who has listened to Rush Limbaugh for more than one broadcast will realize his love of this country, the citizens who live here, and if he hates anything in or about this country it's the direction that the liberal socialists are dragging us."

"If the only people Obama can find for appointees are tax cheats it scares me to think about the ones that he can't appoint, how crooked they are."

"When they recently did the roll call for Congress, 10 percent of the members answered 'present,' the other 90 percent said 'not guilty.'"

"I think the people connected to the local state and federal political parties, Democrats and Republicans, are a bunch of hypocrites when they won't criticize the crooks in their own party."

"Will all you folks quit trying to make a silk purse out of a sow's behind when it comes to Limbaugh, Boertz and Hannity. All they're doing is trying to stir people up."

"Hey, Jimmy, great column Sunday. My favorite country song is Willie Nelson's 'Georgia on My Mind.'"

"To the person who keeps bashing Eastbrook Middle School, I would like to inform you that Eastbrook is up for renovations this year and maybe the next time you're there for a visit it will meet your expectations."

"To the one who's blaming our president for unemployment in our country, the bad economy started a very long time ago when Bush was in there. He's got everything in a sorry mess for our president to straighten out."

"Whoever would make a negative comment about what Fred Toney does at Phoenix High School clearly has no idea of the time, dedication and love this man has for this school, the students and the faculty."

"The girls basketball coach at Northwest Whitfield High School should be fired for beating someone 95-13. Shame on you."

'Raisin in the Sun' opens today for run at Emery Center

To kick off Black History Month in February, local director Bob Brown will present "A Raisin in the Sun" by Lorraine Hansberry today through Sunday at the Emery Center Auditorium in Dalton.

The play tells the story of a lower-class black family that receives a $10,000 check following the death of their patriarch, Walter Younger. What they do with the money causes deep rifts between family members as well as a clash with racism.

Eli Ellington will play the lead role of Walter Lee Younger and Patsy McDade plays his mother, Lena Younger.

Show times are Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 2 p.m. Tickets are $10 for adults and $5 for children and will be available only at the door.

The auditorium is at 110 W. Emery St. For more information, call the Dalton Community Center at (706) 278-8205.

Under Georgia open records law, the Public Safety Commission can name a new chief no sooner than two weeks after announcing the finalists.

Weaver says the plan is for the full commission to interview the three finalists. He said their goal is to name a new chief by the end of the month.

"We are looking for someone who can lead the department to even greater stature, to build on the successes we already have, to deal with some of the difficulties we are running into right now with budgets, to maintain the reputation of the fire department as one of the best in the state and to maintain our current insurance rating," said Weaver.

The City Council cut the fire department's budget by $306,000 this year to $7 million in a round of budget cuts that affected almost all city departments and cut about $5 million total from the city budget. The department has about 93 full-time employees and five fire stations.

MEETING SET

An organizational meeting for an area chapter of the Blue Star Mothers of America will be at the Gospel Broadcasting Network off Cloud Springs Road in Ringgold on Saturday at 3 p.m. Call (423) 762-9528 or e-mail Janis Dearman at jandearman@yahoo.com for more information.

mothers who have sons or daughters in the military. Mothers with honorably discharged ex-military children are also eligible.

"It's so nice to be able to talk to another mother who's going through what you're going through," Dearman said.

She said she and her husband, Jim, adopted Sam when they were missionaries in Asia. He was a 16-month-old from Thailand when they returned to the United States in 1987. Growing up, he enjoyed physical activity and longed to join the military, but she was concerned for his safety and urged him to pursue another career.

When he turned 21 in July 2007 and his dream was still as strong as ever, Dearman said she stopped asking him to reconsider.

He is a military police officer in the Army stationed at Fort Bliss in Texas. Dearman said his unit was scheduled to head to Iraq last month to train and guard Iraqi peace officers. For reasons Dearman still doesn't understand, her son is still in Texas.

She said the Scenic City Chapter is open to anyone. Seven women are signed up now, and the group is holding its first meeting to elect officers on Saturday at the Gospel Broadcasting Network off Cloud Springs Road in Ringgold. Dearman said they plan to meet monthly.

According to the Blue Star Mothers Web site

(www.bluestarmothers.org), the organization provides support for active duty service personnel, promotes patriotism, assists veterans organizations and helps in various volunteer projects to benefit the country.

It is connected with Gold Star Mothers, a separate group open to mothers who have lost a child serving in the military. The tradition of displaying a flag with either a gold or a blue star at a military family's home became prevalent during World War II, according to the Web site.

Dearman said the Scenic City Chapter plans to work with local veterans groups and support area service members.

Kate Walker, treasurer of the Dalton-based military support organization the Family Readiness Group, said there is a need for a group that focuses on the needs of mothers.

"That is an awesome thing because I know a lot of times mothers end up feeling left out," she said.

Octuplets' mom's veil of secrecy gone

WHITTIER, Calif. (AP) — The veil of secrecy octuplets' mother Nadya Suleman shrouded herself in for more than a week was lifted Thursday with the release of public documents showing that the 33-year-old struggled with depression for years until she finally began to realize her childhood dream of having a huge family.

Suleman, who now has 14 children, told doctors she battled with depression for years after she was injured in a riot in 1999 at the state mental hospital where she worked.

The doctors' reports were included in more than 300 pages of documents released. Among other things, the documents reveal that Suleman collected more than $165,000 in disability payments between 2002 and 2008 for an injury she said left her in near-constant pain and helped end her marriage.

Meanwhile, Suleman told NBC what her mother and others have said since the octuplets were born: that she always wanted a huge family to make up for the isolation she felt as an only child.

Chatsworth water system in debt

BY MARK MILLICAN

markmillican@daltoncitizen.com

CHATSWORTH — Mayor Tyson Haynes said Thursday the city's water and sewer rates being "held low for years" has had a disadvantage.

"Because our rates have stayed so low, we have not generated enough revenue to pay for our maintenance and operations and our debt service," he said while talking to Chatsworth-Murray County Rotary Club members. "We have adequate water, but the state can put restrictions on us at any time."

Haynes said there is a possibility a 1 percent "municipal option sales tax," or MOST, could be put on a future ballot in the city to help deal with the sewer and water system's $12 million debt. Already plans are in place to put a freeport referendum on the Nov. 3 election ballot. Haynes said Eton and Murray County governments are also mulling freeport referendums.

The city has an agreement to purchase 400,000 gallons of water a day from Calhoun and 500,000 to 600,000 gallons a day from the Upper Oconee Basin Water Authority in Watkinsville. It also gets 2 million gallons a day from two springs in Eton and up to 2 million a day from Carters Lake, although it was only pumping 1.6 million gallons a day last summer.

Haynes said the city is in good financial shape, but was asked why he planned to apply for part of the federal "bailout" money proposed by the Obama administration.

"I think a lot of that money will be wasted," he said, "but any program that's available to cities and counties for special projects — like grants — I am going to apply for. We've applied for $6.5 million, and most of that would be for water and sewer improvements, and some for a possible training center for public safety employees. Our sewer seems to be the major problem — it's 60 years old."

VIEWPOINTS

Tripped up by the tax code

Congress likes to talk about simplifying the tax code — which, bear in mind, is solely its own creation — but never does. Perhaps the tax problems of three of President Obama's nominees to top posts will prompt it to act.

Nancy Killefer, Obama's choice to be White House performance czar, withdrew over $946.69 in back taxes, interest and penalties for a brief period when she failed to pay the unemployment compensation tax for her household help. This is the recurring nannygate problem that came to prominence when it tripped up then-President Clinton's first two choices for U.S. attorney general.

Thomas Daschle withdrew from consideration as secretary of Health and Human Services over $140,167 in taxes and interest because he failed to treat the use of a company-provided car and driver for three years as taxable income.

Treasury secretary Timothy Geithner was roughed up in his confirmation hearings because of $34,023 in payroll taxes from a two-year stint with the International Monetary Fund. Either he didn't know or it failed to register that Americans who work for international organizations that do not deduct for Social Security are liable for both the employer half and their own half of the federal payroll tax.

These are smart people, surely honest, and presumably with access to good professional tax advice and if they mess up on their taxes for whatever reason it's certainly probable that a lot of other people are coming up short for Uncle Sam because they don't understand the tax code, they're forgetful or they're simply tax dodgers.

David Barlett and James Steele, authors of "The Great American Tax Dodge" estimate "as much as $600 billion — more than two-thirds of the government's stimulus package — is lost each year as a result of tax fraud and avoidance."

Congress could greatly cut that shortfall by fully funding the Internal Revenue Service and its collection and enforcement arms. It makes no sense for Congress to enact tax laws and then cripple the agency that's responsible for carrying them out. But going back to the Reagan years, the lawmakers have seen better political mileage in beating up on the agency.

Congress likes to pretend that the IRS somehow just appeared but the Constitution says quite clearly all bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House, and the Senate may concur or amend. A simplified tax code would make people more likely to comply and easier to catch if they do not. And, as fast as we're going into debt, that $600 billion could really come in handy.

Botched transition

You never get a second chance to make a first post-inaugural impression. Less than three weeks into his first 100 days, Barack Obama has left an indelible mark on his nascent presidency: the mark of incompetence and hubris. Despite the administration's much-touted wealth of bright minds and high bars, the transition has been a complete disaster.

In a double whammy on Tuesday, tax troubles and ethical clouds forced the withdrawal of not one but two high-profile Obama nominees. These come on the heels of former Commerce Secretary-nominee Bill Richardson's withdrawal due to a pay-for-play probe in New Mexico and Treasury Secretary Tim Geithner's "tax goofs" involving his failure to pay $43,000 in federal self-employment taxes for four separate years — until, that is, he was nominated for the Treasury post. Thorough vetting, it seems, is an inconvenient process — a pesky "distraction," if you will — in the Land of Hope and Change.

Health and Human Services Secretary-designee Tom Daschle finally bowed out after aggressive rehabilitative efforts failed. His chummy Senate pals on both sides of the aisle may have been willing to forgive his failure to pay longstanding back taxes owed on limo services, undisclosed consulting fees and dubious charitable donations worth an estimated $146,000, including interest and penalties. But the American people were not. (And an interesting postscript: He may have apologized and dropped out of the administration, but Daschle still owes Medicare taxes equal to 2.9 percent of the personal value of the car service he received from Democratic donor and crony Leo Hindery Jr.)

Just before the Daschle announcement came the withdrawal of Nancy Killefer. She was tapped to be President Obama's "Chief Performance Officer," overseeing compliance, organizational effectiveness and waste management across every federal agency. But the former Clinton Treasury official and head of the prestigious Washington office of the management consulting firm McKinsey & Company, Inc., couldn't be bothered to manage her own household help effectively. She failed for a year and a half to pay employment taxes and had an outstanding tax lien on her home. The lien was worth less than $1,000 — far less than the tax liability Geithner owed.

If I were a left-wing feminist, I'd be sorely tempted to whip out the gender card and give the Good Old Boys Club a few whacks. Killefer gets thrown under the bus, but Geithner gets to drive? No justice, no peace!

Now, compare President Bush's transition track record in 2001. Remember that the traditional 100-day period was shortened as a result of the election lawsuit. Wrote Paul Light of the left-leaning Brookings Institution at the time: "Bush gets an A on the transition into office. He survived his truncated 40-day transition with only one major mistake — Linda Chavez, who withdrew her nomination for Labor Secretary after the flap over allowing an illegal immigrant to stay in her house. ... Bush also deserves an A-plus for the timely assembly of his White House team.

Building around Vice President Dick Cheney, the Bush White House is an MBA's dream: efficient, predictable, well controlled, on time, under budget." During Tuesday's press briefing, glib White House spokesman Robert Gibbs did his best to bat down a rising chorus of questions about his boss's judgment — not only on the nomination "glitches," but also on an ever-growing list of exemptions to Obama's no-lobbyists pledge. Echoing Bill Clinton's "most ethical administration ever" and Nancy Pelosi's "most ethical House ever" mantras, Gibbs defensively asserted: "The bar that we set is the highest that any administration in the country has ever set."

Then how, pray tell, did all the president's tax cheats make it past the front door? And where is Vice President Joe Biden to wag his finger at their lack of patriotism? Team Obama embraced these damaged candidates despite advanced knowledge of their lapses. Killefer's tax lien was four years old. Questions about Daschle's judgment have lingered for years. Ask GOP Sen. John Thune, who defeated Daschle the Dodger in 2004 after news broke of his bogus property-tax homestead exemption claim on his $1.9 million D.C. mansion — which he listed as his primary residence despite voting in South Dakota and claiming it as his primary residence to run for re-election.

The buck stops at the desk of Barack Obama. A little of that humility and personal responsibility he spoke so much about during his inaugural address is now in order.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Feb. 6, the 37th day of 2009. There are 328 days left in the year.

Highlight in History: On Feb. 6, 1911, Ronald Wilson Reagan, the 40th president of the United States, was born in Tampico, Ill.

On this date: In 1778, the United States won official recognition from France with the signing of a Treaty of Alliance in Paris.

In 1788, Massachusetts became the sixth state to ratify the U.S. Constitution.

In 1899, a peace treaty between the United States and Spain was ratified by the U.S. Senate.

Nothing fishy about new museum

Sometimes I don't understand my beloved state of Georgia. How in good conscience can we spend $19 million on something like Go Fish Georgia, which Gov. Sonny Perdue thinks is the greatest thing to hit the state since James Oglethorpe's two feet? We have a $2 billion deficit and severe cuts are being proposed for everything from education to public health, yet we are flacking a fishing tournament. Perdue and his supporters claim a fishing championship can bring several million dollars into the state's economy. So can a hog killing if you put $19 million into promoting it.

Meanwhile, a magnificent new facility is under construction in Columbus that will add millions of dollars to the state's economy without everybody laughing their heads off at us. It is the National Infantry Museum and Soldier Center, a 180,000-square-foot edifice on 200 acres in Patriot Park, adjacent to Fort Benning. The museum is scheduled to open March 20 with former Secretary of State Colin Powell as keynote speaker. I predict the day it opens its doors, the National Infantry Museum will become one of the state's top tourist attractions. It is that impressive.

Lt. Gov. Casey Cagle has toured the site and says, "The Infantry Museum is a great asset not only to Columbus, but to our entire state. It will provide a rich experience for thousands of visitors each year and is a wonderful economic development opportunity."

Ken Stewart, commissioner of the Georgia Department of Economic Development, agrees, "The National

Dick Yarbrough

Infantry Museum is not only a unique addition to Georgia's tourism but a testament to the state's military heritage and personnel." The driving force behind the National Infantry Museum and Soldier Center is Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White. Gen. White retired as commanding general at Fort Benning in Columbus in 1994. He could have ridden off into the sunset with his awards and decorations — including the Silver Star and the Bronze Star from two tours in Vietnam — and lived happily ever after. But he didn't. He is giving back to our state. And what a gift.

The museum is a labor of love for Gen. White. He reminded me that close to 80 percent of all those who have died for their country in war were in the infantry. More than half of all Medals of Honor given have been earned by infantrymen, yet nowhere has there been a proper tribute to those countless numbers who over the past 232 years have had the responsibility for "the last 100 yards" to secure the battlefield — a source of great pride to the infantry.

Patriotism aside, the museum will be a state and even national attraction. Columbus State University's Abbott Turner College of Business projects an annual economic impact of $50 million for Georgia. Gen. White estimates the museum will attract as many as 500,000 people annually to the facility, including the family and friends of the 40,000 young men and women who graduate from Infantry School each year. More importantly, the facility and what it represents will make us stand tall with pride instead of shaking our heads in embarrassment.

Local state Rep. Calvin Smyre, D-Columbus, is positively giddy over the museum. "Having a father and grandfather with over a half century of military service, I have a strong affinity and great respect for our military. I am proud to have the National Infantry Museum in Columbus, and all Georgians will be proud to claim it as their own."

I don't have the space to tell you all the good things that will be available at the National Infantry Museum — interactive exhibits, an IMAX theater, the World War II Company Street where Gen. George Patton lived and worked, weapons, simulators, stories of heroism, educational and patriotic programs as well as soil from the U.S. Infantry's battlefields going back to the Revolutionary War.

Take my word for it: the National Infantry Museum and Soldier Center is spectacular. You will need to see it for yourself to appreciate it. By the way, admission is free. And it beats Go Fish Georgia like a drum.

Curse of senior men: Nighttime trips to bathroom

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Please explain the curse of senior men called nocturia. I must get up from three to nine times a night to urinate. I do not have this urgency during the day. I have tried Flomax at different times without any difference. — J.P.

ANSWER: It's not a curse only of senior men. It happens to senior women too.

Paul G. Donohue

However, since an enlarged prostate gland is a male-only problem, let's start with that.

The prostate gland is located just below the bladder and wrapped around the urethra (the tube that empties the bladder) enlarges with age. The enlarged gland makes it impossible for men to completely empty their bladder. It fills rapidly, and men have to empty it repeatedly and urgently. Medicines like the one you took often can help. Perhaps you didn't stay on it long enough. There are others. A host of surgical procedures, some that can be done in the doctor's office, also can free the urethra from the grip of an enlarged prostate.

Age leads to nocturia in both women and men. In younger years, the daytime production of urine is three times the nighttime production. At older ages, urine production becomes a night-shift thing. Partly, that's due to a diminished nocturnal output of antidiuretic hormone, a hormone that slows down the kidneys' urine making. On top of that, the bladder shrinks. Holding less urine makes it necessary to empty it more often. To minimize nighttime urine production, cut down on evening fluid intake. Don't drink any alcohol after dinner. Stop all caffeine from noon on. If you take a water pill, ask the doctor if you can take it first thing in the morning.

It's been drilled into people to drink eight glasses of water a day. That much water isn't necessary. Devotion to drinking water is another reason for nighttime trips to the bathroom.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My wife turned 70 in November. She has recently been diagnosed with primary biliary cirrhosis. Her doctor has staged her at the earliest of the three stages of this illness. What has concerned us is that he mentioned that a liver transplant might be needed down the road. He has her on URSO and on itch medicine. This diagnosis came as a surprise. Will you help us understand its cause, treatment and prognosis? — J.G.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

ANSWER: The liver makes bile, which aids in food digestion, especially fat digestion. Bile trickles out of the liver through a series of canals, called ducts, and eventually flows into the gallbladder, which is tucked under the liver.

In primary biliary cirrhosis, the immune system attacks the liver ducts that drain bile. Bile retained in the liver destroys liver cells and the liver ducts. That leads to liver scarring. Cirrhosis is a scarred liver.

Quite often, as in your wife's case, the diagnosis is a surprise because people often have few to no symptoms at the time of diagnosis. Lab tests reveal the illness. When symptoms occur, two outstanding ones are itching and fatigue. The skin and whites of the eyes might turn yellow.

Primary biliary cirrhosis is something that happens mostly to middle-aged women, a fact that hasn't been completely explained.

URSO has greatly improved the outlook for this illness. When patients are started on treatment in its early stages, the prognosis improves even more. Liver transplant is a possibility in the future, but the number of transplants for primary biliary cirrhosis has decreased since the introduction of URSO. Your wife might never face that prospect.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I read that 10 minutes of sunlight for at least three days a week is beneficial for the production of vitamin D. Is being in the sun at 5 p.m. as good as being in the sun between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m.? — Concerned

ANSWER: The sun's ultraviolet B rays, the ones that stimulate the skin's production of vitamin D, are at their maximum between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. From November through March, because of Earth's position relative to the sun, people in northern climates get very little ultraviolet B rays. These people need to eat foods enriched with vitamin D or take a vitamin D supplement.

Measure preserves HOPE fees

By GREG BLUESTEIN
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA — The Georgia House quickly adopted a measure Thursday that could soften the blow of any cuts to the lottery-funded HOPE Scholarship.

The proposal, which passed 159-0, would allow recipients of the popular scholarship to keep their $300 book allowance unless lottery revenues drop significantly. A similar measure passed last year but was vetoed by Gov. Sonny Perdue.

The measure, which now goes to the Senate, would trigger a $150 reduction in the book allowance if lottery revenue falls 8 percent below the costs of the scholarship and pre-kindergarten programs.

The book allowances would be eliminated completely if revenues fell to 16 percent in the second year. And other fee payments to scholarship recipients would be eliminated if revenues fell 25 percent short in the third year.

Current guidelines, adopted in 2004, would begin to slash the book payments if lottery revenue fell just $1 short of the program's costs.

State Rep. Ben Harbin, an Evans Republican who sponsored the legislation, said the measure would help protect the scholarship for future years. He pointed to the program's cash reserves — which now top $960 million — as reason to back it.

But the measure's impact may be short-lived. While Georgia lottery sales have ticked upward despite the sinking economy, state officials fear the program's cost could overtake revenues within a few years.

"If we continue to get bad economic news, I'm not sure what the impact will be on our sales," Georgia Lottery Corp. President Margaret DeFrancisco said at a board meeting last month.

Justice undergoes cancer surgery

WASHINGTON — Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg had surgery Thursday for pancreatic cancer, raising the possibility that one of the ideologically divided court's leading liberals — and its only woman — might have to curtail her work or even step down before she had planned. Ginsburg, 75, has been a justice since 1993. She has been increasingly vocal in recent years about the court's more conservative stances, especially after the appointments made by President George W. Bush. Pancreatic cancer is often deadly, although the court said doctors apparently found Ginsburg's growth at an early stage.

Vote delayed for Labor nominee

WASHINGTON — Labor Secretary nominee Hilda Solis became the latest Cabinet nominee to face questions about unpaid taxes Thursday as a Senate panel abruptly postponed a scheduled vote on her confirmation. The postponement came after revelations that Solis' husband settled tax liens on his California auto repair business this week that had been outstanding for as long as 16 years. The discovery posed another political headache for a White House already chafing after tax problems and other controversies derailed some administration appointments, including former Sen. Tom Daschle's nomination as health secretary. President Barack Obama pledged in TV interviews this week that he would "make sure that we're not screwing up again" in the vetting process.

Charges dropped in Gitmo terror trial

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon's senior judge overseeing terror trials at Guantanamo Bay dropped charges Thursday against an al-Qaida suspect in the 2000 USS Cole bombing, upholding President Barack Obama's order to freeze military tribunals there. The charges against suspected al-Qaida bomber Abd al-Rahim al-Nashiri marked the last active Guantanamo war crimes case. The legal move by Susan J. Crawford, the top legal authority for military trials at Guantanamo, brings all cases into compliance with Obama's Jan. 22 executive order to halt terrorist court proceedings at the U.S. Navy base in Cuba.

FBI takes interest in 'Tylenol Man'

BOSTON — James W. Lewis has a habit of getting into trouble. And a knack for getting out of it, too. He was charged with killing and dismembering a man in Kansas City, Mo., in 1978, but the case was thrown out. He was jailed on rape charges decades later in Massachusetts, but went free when the victim refused to testify. And while authorities in Chicago have long suspected Lewis was responsible for the deadly 1982 Tylenol poisonings, the only thing they ever pinned on him was an extortion attempt against the maker of the pain reliever. No one was ever charged in the seven cyanide deaths. Now the FBI says there are new leads in the Tylenol case and seized a computer and boxes of files from Lewis' Boston-area home. The mysterious and sudden flurry of activity has raised hopes of a long-awaited break in the sensational 26-year-old case.

Treasury overpaid for bank stocks

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government watchdog has concluded that the federal government gave financial institutions a $78 billion subsidy last year by overpaying for stocks and other assets as part of its massive Wall Street rescue program.

In a report scheduled for release Friday, the Congressional Oversight Panel for the bailout funds found that in some cases the government paid dramatically more than the actual value of the stocks at the time of the transactions.

Financially ailing insurance giant American International Group, deemed by the Treasury Department to be too big to be allowed to fail, received $40 billion from the Treasury for assets valued at $14.8 billion, the oversight panel found.

The findings added to the frustrations of lawmakers already wary of the $700 billion rescue plan, known as the Troubled Asset Relief Program. Congress approved the plan last fall, but members of both parties criticized spending decisions by the Bush administration and former Treasury Secretary Henry Paulson.

The misgivings come as new Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner is preparing to place the Obama administration's imprint on the program with a sweeping new framework for helping banks, loosening credit and helping reduce foreclosure. Geithner plans to unveil the changes Monday.

In a bright spot for the rescue program, the same banks that received capital infusions from Treasury have already paid $271 million in dividends to the federal government and are expected to pay $1.5 billion more in dividends by the end of this month. Wells Fargo, which received a $25 billion infusion, has already announced it would pay Treasury $371 million in dividends this month.

The oversight panel examined 10 transactions, including eight made under a capital purchase program designed to put liquidity into the banks in hopes of easing credit. That money went to banks considered "healthy" financially but in need of capital to make loans.

Two other transactions went to AIG and to Citigroup Inc. under programs designed to help companies that were facing serious financial difficulties.

Overall, the panel and the analysts it retained to conduct the valuation study found that the Treasury used taxpayers' money to pay $62.5 billion more than the value of assets in the 10 transactions it examined. By extrapolating to the more than 300 institutions that received money, it concluded that the government in effect paid $78 billion more than the actual value of the asset at the time.

PHYSICS DEMONSTRATION

Murray County High School student Kelsey Swilling, 17, tries to direct a "balloon rocket" down a string during an honors physics class Thursday to demonstrate Newton's laws of motion. While the balloon should have traveled the entire length of string, it twisted on the tape and spun out of control and off the string as Swilling tried to steer it.

Senate struggles on stimulus

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an uncertain reach across party lines, Senate moderates struggled for a compromise on economic stimulus legislation Thursday as the government spit out grim new jobless figures and President Barack Obama warned of more bad news ahead.

With partisan tensions rising, several Republican attempts to remake the bill — with higher tax cuts, lower spending and fresh relief for homeowners — failed on party-line votes.

"This is the moment for leadership that matches the great test of our time," Obama said Thursday night as the Senate plodded through a fourth day of debate on the legislation at the heart of his economic recovery plan. Earlier, he declared, "The time for talk is over. The time for action is now."

The president added he would "love to see additional improvements" in the bill, a gesture to the moderates from both parties who were at work trying to trim the bill with a newly recalculated, $937 billion price tag.

After fitful, secretive talks lasting well into the evening, the would-be compromisers remained shy of agreement, and Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., announced they could have another day to work at it.

Sen. Claire McCaskill, D-Mo., said the group was discussing reductions in the bill in the range of $100 billion or more and expressed optimism about the outcome. No details were available.

Increasingly, the events that mattered most were not the long roll calls on the Senate floor, but the private conversations in which the White House and Democratic leaders sought — either with the support of a large group of centrist lawmakers or without them — to clear the bill.

Either approach remained a possibility for the Democratic leadership. One path could lead to passage with as few as 60 votes, the minimum needed, while the other presented the opportunity for a larger bipartisan success for the young administration.

"As I have explained to people in that group, they cannot hold the president of the United States hostage," said Reid, D-Nev. "If they think they're going to rewrite this bill and Barack Obama is going to walk away from what he is trying to do for the American people, they've got another thought coming."

Republicans countered that neither the president nor Democratic congressional leaders have been willing to seek common ground on the first major bill of the new administration.

"We're not having meaningful negotiations. ... It's a bad way to start," said Sen. John McCain of Arizona, Obama's opponent in last fall's presidential campaign.

In an Associated Press interview, he said Obama "gave the Democrats the leeway to basically shut out Republicans starting with the House and now here in the Senate, and I don't think that's good."

Murray: Decision due on Monday were originally zoned to attend Gladden Middle School which feeds into Murray County High, said superintendent Vickie Reed.

Board member Crystal Felty said that when the board redistricted the county in 2007, there was an understanding that all the students would transfer to the high school their middle school feeds into. Gladden students would attend Murray High and Bagley students would attend North Murray.

However, about 80 Bagley students were originally supposed to attend Gladden but didn't because of a more relaxed transfer policy, said Dean Donehoo, director of administrative services. When that policy tightened in 2007, the board voted to allow the transferred students to finish at their current middle school.

Now several parents and school board members say they don't understand why their children can't continue attending high school classes with the same group of students they grew up with.

The districting policy also affects school sports. Under Georgia High School Athletic Association rules, students who attend a school out of their district are not eligible to play sports at their new school for one year. Donehoo said school officials are still trying to clarify what that means for Murray schools.

Bartley said more important matters than athletics are at stake.

"This is not about athletics," she said. "This is about my child, his happiness, his well-being."

The board meets again Monday at 6 p.m. at Spring Place Elementary School and will address the issue then, said board chairman Greg Shoemaker.

Congress retreats, luxuriously

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of Congress were quick to shame corporate executives for over-the-top extravagance during the economic crisis, flying private jets and taking luxury junkets. But some lawmakers are strolling fancy resorts spending tens of thousands of taxpayer dollars and mingling with lobbyists.

"We're very mindful" of perceptions, House Democratic Caucus Chairman John Larson told reporters Thursday camped outside of the sprawling Kingsmill Resort & Spa in Williamsburg, Va., where House Democrats spent about $100,000 on their three-day annual retreat. "It's serious and it's from morning till night. We've been dwelling, rightfully, on the economy," said Larson, D-Conn.

Republicans and Democrats in the House have passed new rules governing such trips even as lawmakers say the events are useful for negotiating public policy. But with a nation tightening its belt and already fatigued by stories of corporate excess, perceptions matter these days in Washington. Congress risks shattering its glass house throwing stones.

"If it's a luxurious setting or if there's particularly high level entertainment, then they are running into the same problem," said Meredith McGehee of the Campaign Legal Center, a government ethics watchdog group. "They don't get that these are tough economic times, that Americans are struggling and they need to do their part."

Wells Fargo took that point when The Associated Press reported this week that the bank was rewarding its top performers with a lavish conference in Las Vegas, just after the company received a $25 billion bailout from taxpayers. After criticism from Congress, Wells Fargo canceled the getaway.

Democrats and Republicans defend the trips as valuable for the relationships they strengthen and they say details of such retreats are cleared in advance by the House ethics committee and comply with all rules and laws. Lawmakers pay their own expenses at the House retreats, including room rental, and may use their campaign reelection funds.

Immediate, Effective Pain Relief

The study clearly showed that the users of JointFlex experienced substantial and immediate pain relief. The study confirmed what thousands of satisfied JointFlex customers around the world already know...JointFlex helps you achieve a better quality of life because of its powerful and immediate pain relieving action. But there's more!

LONG-TERM IMPROVING Pain Relief

The users of JointFlex also experienced a totally unexpected and dramatic result. With continued use, a majority obtained long-term pain relief that continued to improve throughout the entire eight-week study. But that's not all!

OsteoArthritis Pain ELIMINATED!

Even more amazing, one-third of the JointFlex users had their pain gradually decrease to the point where it was completely or nearly completely eliminated! By using JointFlex daily as directed, you too may be able to substantially reduce or even eliminate that chronic arthritis pain that's been nagging you for years.

The gradual and continual improvement in long-term pain relief observed in the JointFlex clinical study was found to be consistent with previous studies conducted with orally administered Glucosamine and Chondroitin Sulfate. JointFlex will be further studied to determine the mechanism of these dramatic results and to verify that they are not due to random chance alone. Individual results may vary. Highlights of the study are available by calling the toll free number or they can be viewed online at www.jointflex.com.

How Does JointFlex Work?

Only the JointFlex formula utilizes exclusive FUSOME® skin delivery technology and contains camphor plus Glucosamine and Chondroitin Sulfate for skin conditioning. This technology enables the beneficial ingredients to be delivered quickly and safely to your skin.

“JointFlex provides significant immediate pain relief, plus IMPROVING pain relief with continued use”

“JointFlex is easily applied to painful areas, leaves no greasy residue, has no lingering pungent smell and there are NO PILLS/NO SYSTEMIC SIDE EFFECTS”

Why Continue To Take Pills?

If you are concerned about the negative side effects of the pills you are taking or tired of the stomach discomfort that often goes along with them, it's time to switch to JointFlex. Just rub JointFlex onto your painful areas. It's that easy. Within a matter of minutes, you won't even know you have JointFlex on other than the soothing pain relief you will be experiencing. With JointFlex, there are NO pills to swallow and NO negative systemic side effects to worry about like those associated with NSAIDs or oral prescription pain relievers.

Is Pain Keeping You Awake at Night?

If you are among the millions who cannot get a good night sleep because of nagging arthritis aches and pains, why not try JointFlex? PREP WRESTLING: AREA TRADITIONAL TOURNAMENTS

Postseason pressure builds

Locals face tough task

BY MARTY KIRKLAND

martykirkland@daltoncitizen.com

Be on or be gone.

That's the rule for local wrestlers beginning today as they head to area traditional tournaments where the field in each of the 14 weight classes is too good, too deep and too unforgiving to allow anything but a top-notch effort from start to finish if they want to keep this season going by earning a spot at next weekend's state sectionals.

Tucker

"With 15 teams in our area who've all got good wrestlers, it's tough," said Northwest Whitfield coach Allen Tucker, whose Bruins are aiming for a third straight Area 7-4A traditional title.

Joining the Bruins at Rome High for the two-day event will be Area 7-4A duals champion Dalton and Murray County. Southeast, meanwhile, will compete in the two-day Area 6-3A traditional at LaFayette High.

Parity was the rule among the more talented half of the area at last month's 7-4A duals, where the prevent favorites to win it all went at least six teams deep. To some degree, that's expected to be the case for wrestlers in their individual brackets this weekend.

But Murray County coach Chris Thornbury sees the most wide open competition coming for those wrestlers who are on the cusp of one of the coveted top four places — the finish required to advance to state sectionals — in their respective brackets. While some weight classes will have fairly reliable favorites as deep as the first three spots, he said, the suspense will be delivered in the fight for fourth.

And while most guessed correctly that teams in the northern half of Area 7-4A would go deepest at area duals, traditional is a different beast where even teams not talented enough to fill out a strong duals lineup might have a handful of individuals who can handle themselves quite well.

"There's a whole lot of kids in this area that are on the bubble, those four, five, six kids that could place," Thornbury said. "At area duals, I was really surprised — those southern teams are tough, too ... even the teams not in the top echelon have one or two good guys. And that's hard with 15 teams when only four guys get to go."

MISTY WATSON/The Daily Citizen

Murray County's Dalton Lane (front) battles Northwest Whitfield's David Lewis during their 135-pound match earlier this season. Lane and Lewis will be among many area wrestlers trying to fight their way to Area 7-4A and Area 6-3A titles this weekend in Rome and LaFayette, respectively.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

Summitt captures 1,000th

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — In this season of lowered expectations for Tennessee, Pat Summitt still reached unprecedented heights: 1,000 victories.

Summitt became the first Division I basketball coach — man or woman — to win 1,000 career games Thursday night as her 12th-ranked Lady Vols beat Georgia 73-43.

These baby Lady Vols (17-4), with seven freshmen on the roster, are nothing like the squads that brought Summitt her seventh and eighth national championships in the previous two seasons. This is an inexperienced group that had Summitt joking about whether they would even be up to the task of winning the 17 games she needed to reach 1,000 this season.

"It's a hard number to even comprehend," Summitt said.

"It's a time to reflect on a number of things, the administration saying yes to women's basketball and giving us an opportunity to play on the biggest stage in the

PREP GOLF: MURRAY COUNTY

Wildes, Gibson sign grants with Andrew

BY LARRY FLEMING

larryfleming@daltoncitizen.com

Murray County High School golfers Jacob Wildes and Zach Gibson want to use a two-year experience at Andrew College as a springboard to playing the sport at a higher profile major college.

"Zach and I are of the same mind-set," Wildes said. "We both could have gone to a mediocre four-year school or go to Andrew College and work hard to get to the highest level possible in two years."

Wildes and Gibson became future Tigers on Thursday when they signed athletic-academic scholarships to the junior college in Cuthbert. Andrew started a men's golf program in 1998 and the Tigers have won three region titles and qualified for three national tournaments. Andrew added women's golf for the 2006-07 season.

"I'm very excited about it," Gibson said. "I like it because it's a small school (Andrew's enrollment is about 300). When we visited down there everything seemed personal, and everybody knew everybody and I liked that aspect."

PREP VOLLEYBALL: NORTHWEST

Cochran to play for Bryan College

BY LARRY FLEMING

larryfleming@daltoncitizen.com

Cassie Cochran decided during her freshman year at Northwest Whitfield that she wanted to play volleyball in college.

On Thursday, Cochran signed an athletic scholarship to do just that at Bryan College in Dayton, Tenn.

Under coach Leo Sayles, Bryan has become an NAIA powerhouse and reached the 2007 national tournament. The Lions were ranked No. 1 early in the 2008 season, but was eliminated from the postseason in the Appalachian Athletic Conference tournament in Kingsport, Tenn. They finished 27-9.

"I narrowed my choices to LaGrange, Shorter and Bryan," Cochran said. "I visited Bryan, stayed the night with the team, felt comfortable and happy about how good their team is. And I like the small classrooms too."

Cochran, an integral cog in the Lady Bruins' drive to a runner-up finish in the Area 7-4A tournament and a spot in the state tournament last season, was also impressed with Sayles.

"I like how he coaches and I like him," she said.

Cochran gave up basketball to concentrate on volleyball in her sophomore year and that decision paid off with Thursday afternoon's signing party at the high school in Tunnel Hill.

"Cassie, like a lot of other girls, came in as a freshman having never played volleyball," Lady Bruins coach Richard Taylor said. "For four years she's worked really hard. In fact, she's one of the hardest working players we've had in our program. By her senior year, she was one of our vocal lead-

PRO BASEBALL

Ted Turner, right, jokes with Hank Aaron and his wife Billye Aaron during a celebration of Aaron's 75th birthday Thursday in Atlanta

Happy birthday, Hammer

BY PAUL NEWBERRY
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA — Hank Aaron was peppered with hate mail as he closed in on Babe Ruth's home run record.

On his 75th birthday, "Hammerin' Hank" felt nothing but love.

From former President Bill Clinton to baseball commissioner Bud Selig, the famous came together to celebrate a landmark birthday for the man who hit 755 homers during his Hall of Fame career.

In an interesting twist, Aaron was honored by some 700 people at a downtown Atlanta hotel on the same day Barry Bonds was in a San Francisco courtroom, pleading not guilty to perjury charges stemming from testimony that he never knowingly took performance-enhancing drugs as he was chasing Aaron's record.

"This means an awful lot to me," Aaron said after posing for pictures with some of his birthday guests. "It means you tried to carry yourself in such a way that people have respect for you. That's the most important thing. I don't try to do anything special. I just try to share whatever I've been able to accomplish with other people."

He declined to discuss Bonds' legal woes, nor the perception that Aaron remained the true home run king even after his record was eclipsed in 2007.

"I haven't been keeping up with it. I really haven't," Aaron said of the Bonds case. "I haven't thought about it one way or the other. Really."

Selig, a longtime friend of Aaron who watched him play when the Braves were in Milwaukee, declined to discuss Bonds' court case. The commissioner balked, as well, when asked whether there was any chance the baseball record book could be altered — an asterisk, perhaps? — if the former San Francisco Giants slugger is convicted on federal perjury charges.

"Well, let's not get into hypotheticals," Selig said. "This is a night to enjoy. Let's see how that all plays out."

Phelps suspended 3 months

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Michael Phelps was suspended from competition for three months by USA Swimming, the latest fallout from a photo that showed the Olympic great inhaling from a marijuana pipe.

The sport's national governing body also cut off its financial support to Phelps for the same three-month period, effective Thursday.

"This is not a situation where any anti-doping rule was violated, but we decided to send a strong message to Michael because he disappointed so many people, particularly the hundreds of thousands of USA Swimming member kids who look up to him as a role model and a hero," the Colorado-based federation said in a statement.

"Michael has voluntarily accepted this reprimand and has committed to earn back our trust."

Phelps won a record eight gold medals in Beijing and returned to America as one of the world's most acclaimed athletes. Now he's enduring a wave of bad news in the wake of the photo, published Sunday.

COMMENTARY: PRO WRESTLING

Rourke reconsidering show

Here are the news and notes from the world of professional wrestling:

• Mickey Rourke, star of the critically-acclaimed movie "The Wrestler," may be at Wrestlemania 25 after all. After backing out of a match with Chris Jericho, WWE officials have invited Rourke to the "Super Bowl of Wrestling."

"We are pleased that Mickey Rourke will be in attendance at Wrestlemania to support the WWE Superstars who support him and the film in which he stars, The Wrestler," WWE officials said on wwe.com.

• Ric Flair will be on "Raw" Monday. Announcer Jim Ross would rather not see him step in the ring to wrestle ever again. "Ric Flair makes any event bigger and his star still shines brightly in my eyes but, simply as a fan, I would rather remember Ric Flair the wrestler, no pun intended, as he was and enjoy his antics and machinations in other forms at an event like Wrestlemania if that indeed is a potential destination for the incomparable 'Nature Boy,'" Ross wrote on his blog at www.jrs-barbq.com.

• The Local Corner: There are some intriguing plot lines at TWA. Where was Logan Chase III last Saturday night? The Shepherders have won the tag titles again. The Big Wood is back in town. And Johnny Quaz is the new Southern heavyweight champion, vowing never to lose the title.

Jamie Jones

Valentine's weekend, TWA will host the "Rumble in the Concrete Jungle" on Friday and Saturday nights.

In matches last Friday night: Mark Pain, Mic Force and Robert K.O. Adams defeated Tyler Gauge, Dakota Outlaw No. 1, Chad Giuliani; Honor and Respect and Billy Jester beat Silas Quaz, Barry Allan and David Pillman; Talon Williams topped Adren Lynn; Renga San outlasted Tyler Sutton; Second Dimension won a three-way tag team match; Johnny Viper and Dino Dupree defeated Mikey Watkins and Alex Michaels.

TWA runs Fridays at 8 p.m. in the TWA Arena off Reed Road in north Whitfield County, about three miles north of the bypass.

The Action Zone runs Saturdays at 8 p.m. Tickets are $5 for adults and $3 for kids 6 to 12. Kids under 6 are free. Any military member with proper identification will be admitted free.

• Trivia Teaser: Name the eight inductees into the WWE Hall of Fame in 2008. Check back next week for the answer. Last week's question: Who plays "The Ayatollah" in "The Wrestler"? Ernest "The Cat" Miller.

Jamie Jones will be "Wooing!" like mad on Monday night. He can be reached at jamiejones@daltoncitizen.com or at (706) 272-7723.

Kiffin apologizes to UF coach

BY BETH RUCKER

Associated Press Writer

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Lane Kiffin's first game against Florida just got much more interesting.

The new Tennessee coach was reprimanded by the Southeastern Conference and issued an apology on Thursday for falsely accusing Florida's Urban Meyer of a recruiting violation.

Earlier in the day, Kiffin Volunteers told fans at a breakfast celebrating UT's recruiting class that Meyer violated rules by phoning Nu'Keese Richardson while the wide receiver prospect was on an official visit at Tennessee.

"I love the fact that Urban had to cheat and still didn't get him," Kiffin said, according to a WVLT-TV report.

NCAA and Southeastern Conference officials said it is not against recruiting rules to contact a recruit while they are on an official visit to another school.

Florida athletic director Jeremy Foley rushed to his coach's defense, delivering a quick and harsh response to Kiffin's statement and called for him to apologize.

"It is obvious that coach Kiffin doesn't know that there is not a rule precluding phone contact with a prospect during an official visit on another campus during a contact period," Foley said in a statement.

"His allegations are inappropriate, out of line and, most importantly, totally false. It is completely unfair to Urban Meyer, our coaching staff, our football program and our institution," he said.

SEC commissioner Mike Slive then reprimanded Kiffin for publicly criticizing Meyer, which is against the league's code of ethics.

That led to Kiffin's apology.

"She made herself good with the hard work. As a freshman, she could barely jump at all. In her senior year, she was the best jumper on the team and hit the ball the hardest. That was all through hard work on her part."

Taylor said Cochran is going to a solid college program and he believes she can be a valuable contributor to Bryan's continued success.

"I don't know how much she's going to play next season," Taylor said. "But she'll work hard enough to eventually play for them. I think they're getting a really good player."

With volleyball not offered at the middle school level by Whitfield County schools, Cochran accelerated her improvement timetable by joining Chattanooga and North Georgia Junior Olympic teams.

"After playing on the Junior Olympic teams," she said, "that's when I decided I wanted to play volleyball in college."

"Some people talked me into trying out for the Junior Olympics and once I made the team, I decided to give up basketball and concentrate on volleyball."

Cochran was a Daily Citizen All-Area honorable mention selection her senior season with the Lady Bruins.

As a senior, Cochran was credited with 147 kills, 94 digs, 17 blocks, 11 assists, 27 aces and a 91.2 serve percentage, all "good solid numbers," Taylor said.

Northwest defeated Habersham Central but saw its 2008 season end in a three-game loss to No. 1-ranked Marist in the state tournament. The Lady Bruins finished 37-10 and won the Area 7-4A regular-season title.

Sign: Shoot for state berth

For Wildes, attending Andrew will be almost like going home.

"It's an area of South Georgia where I grew up," said Wildes, son of former Indians basketball coach Kerry Wildes. "It's going to be kind of nostalgic going down there. We moved to Chatsworth when I was about 7 years old."

Murray County golf coach Brett Dotson said the hard work put in by the two golfers has paid off.

"They've lived at the golf course working on their games," Dotson said. "They've gotten a lot better. They've both played for us since they were freshmen. In fact, Jacob worked out with us some when he was an eighth grader."

"They're getting the maximum from their scholarships and they're excited about going down there."

Wildes said his game suffered as a junior when he put pressure on himself trying to impress any coach that might be watching his performances.

"I was thinking this could be the time someone would see me play," he said. "As a result, I struggled last year. Both of us are glad to have this (signing) behind us so we can enjoy our senior year."

Dotson said Gibson had a tournament average of 82 last season while Wildes' average was 86.

Sticking together for at least two years means a lot to Gibson.

"That definitely helps," Gibson said. "It makes for a smoother transition into college life because there's somebody there you already know."

On their visit to the school, the two golfers met Andrew golf instructor Mike Riffe, toured the campus and played a round of golf at the Tigers' home course at Bagby State Park. Riffe was in Chatsworth on Thursday for the signing ceremonies.

"On our visit, coach Riffe seemed like a real nice guy and came across as a coach who would do anything in the world to help us," Gibson said.

Gibson hopes the Indians, who will return to Region 7-4A competition this season after spending two years in Region 5-5A, can make a run at a region championship in his final year at Murray.

"We really want to finish first or second in the region and get to the state tournament this year," Gibson said. "I think that's a legitimate goal."

Area: Rugged

Dalton coach Charles Mitchell was even more direct: "There's going to be some good kids left at home this year."

The size of Area 7-4A also heightens the formula a team must follow to win any traditional tourney.

Those wrestlers seeded high and expected to go furthest in the bracket must do as much damage as possible, seizing major decisions, technical falls and pins whenever possible. Those wrestlers who have something less than a legitimate shot at an area medal must win as long as possible and, when losing, do so with minimal damage — because one surrendered pin in a forgotten early round could be enough to swing the final tally in a tourney where the top teams are expected to have little breathing room.

After watching his Bruins win two area traditionals against smaller 7-4A fields by placing as many as 13 wrestlers, Tucker knows the winner of this year's event will likely have a different count in that department.

"The veterans, you pretty much know by now what you're going to get from them," Tucker said. "It's the young kids that have been getting better all year. Did they get better than those kids they wrestled earlier in the season?"

While a Northwest championship would give the Bruins a hard-earned three-peat and a Murray County win would be the Indians' first area title since 2000, a first-place finish by Dalton would grant the Catamounts 7-4A's first double dip since Ringgold won the duals and traditional crowns in 2006.

Since going on to finish second at the Class 4A state duals, Dalton has proved talented enough to claim first and second place finishes at two traditional events and Mitchell has strived to remind his wrestlers that their individual efforts still have a big effect on the fate of their teammates — even if it's not as obvious as during a dual meet.

To that end, Mitchell even recently asked the Cats to take note of the symbolism in a piggy back drill in which one wrestler carries another down the mat as fast as possible.

"You're not just out there for you," Mitchell said. "Every time you're out there, you're carrying the hopes and dreams of your team."

That will be especially crucial for wrestlers who suffer a loss that sends them to the wrestlebacks, where they can still make a big difference for their teams — if they're able to shake off the frustration of their defeat.

"What's going to happen in this thing is that it's so spread out, the kids who aren't necessarily the best kids but are battling to be on the bubble, they've got to score points for you," Thornbury said. "You can't have a weight class not score points. You need those guys to battle through and get a point or two."

Southeast's Neil Nichols, who's in his second season leading the Raiders, takes to LaFayette a lineup that ranges from returning state qualifiers to freshmen entering their first area traditional.

The coach has done his best to maintain a low-key approach this week.

"I tried to steal a line from the Super Bowl coaches and tell them it's just a tournament," Nichols said. "Yeah, this is the postseason and all the big deal that goes with it, but we have to keep them focused like it's just another tournament we're going to."

In an area that includes the host LaFayette Ramblers, who have won two straight state titles in both duals and traditional competition, avoiding anxiety might be a tough task, but Nichols believes his team is anything but out of its league this weekend.

"We need our hammers, our top wrestlers, to do their job," Nichols said. "They need to be placing. But we're going to fill every weight class and we need some freshmen to step up and win some matches. I really think we're a top three team if we get everybody to wrestle the way they can."

women's game. I appreciate that."

The landmark win came on the court named for Summitt, who just keeps racking up achievements for others to chase. All the fans in the arena began standing with about a minute left, and they clapped to "Rocky Top" as orange and white streamers fell from the ceiling.

Summitt gave Georgia coach Andy Landers a hug on the sideline.

"I feel like I've been extremely blessed, and I thank God for the many opportunities I've had to be your coach and work with these young ladies, and so I want to thank all of you. I want to thank every person who's been a part of my staff. ... They gave their absolute best," Summitt said.

Tennessee fans missed the celebration Jan. 29, 2006, when Summitt won her 900th game in Nashville. She won her first game at home, and Nos. 300, 800 and 880 — the one that pushed her past Dean Smith for most wins by a Division I coach — came at home.

Glory Johnson scored a career-high 20 points to lead the Lady Vols. Christy Marshall led Georgia with 16, Ashley Houts had 11 and Porsha Phillips 10.

Villegas shoots 63 for lead at Buick

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN DIEGO — Camilo Villegas seems to play his best golf when Tiger Woods isn't around to defend a title.

Villegas holed out for an eagle early in his round and made a string of birdies late for a 9-under 63 on the easier North Course at Torrey Pines, giving him a three-shot lead Thursday in the Buick Invitational as he goes for a bizarre hat trick.

A victory this week would be his third straight at a tournament where Woods was the defending champion.

Villegas won the BMW Championship and Tour Championship last fall to close out the FedEx Cup portion of the season — both won by Woods the previous year — and he got off to a blazing start on a cloudy, chilly day along the Pacific bluffs.

He hit a lob wedge over the bunker and into the hole for eagle on the par-4 second hole to quickly put his name atop the leaderboard, then built his lead with three birdies in a four-hole stretch on the back nine.

Davis Love III, coming up on two pivotal weeks as he tries to get into the Accenture Match Play Championship, and Aaron Baddeley each shot 66 on the North.

The best score on the South Course, site of the U.S. Open last summer, belonged to Scott Sterling and Matthew Goggin at 69. Given the disparity of these courses, the leaderboard doesn't sort itself out until everyone has played both sides.

Phil Mickelson, a three-time winner of the Buick Invitational, put together a solid round of 70 on the South Course with a few big par saves.

British Open and PGA champion Padraig Harrington started strong with three birdies on the opening four holes of the North Course, but a four-putt double bogey on the 17th sent him to a 71.

Woods is the four-time defending champion at the Buick Invitational, but still is recovering from season-ending surgery on his left knee — a week after his U.S. Open playoff victory.

"I'm glad he's not here," Villegas said. "He plays pretty good around here, I can tell you that."

Villegas wasn't too shabby on the North Course, which was more than 3 1/2 strokes easier than the South, but still no bargain with blustery, cool conditions.

Coming off a missed cut last week in the FBR Open, Villegas opened with a simple birdie on the par-5 first, then made a mistake with his tee shot on the 326-yard second hole by hitting his drive to the right, 50 yards from the flag with a bunker in the way.

Using a new 63-degree sand wedge, he popped it up over the sand and never saw it go in the hole.

"I had a decent lie," Villegas said. "I just puffed it up in the air, and I knew it was good, but I didn't see the ball go in."

He made some big putts on the back nine, including a 25-foot birdie on the 14th with a big break to the left. That followed a chip that bounced harder than he expected, part of the difficulty of playing the firm greens.

It should get tougher today.

DID YOU KNOW?

Kyle Busch won more than a third (eight) of the first 22 Cup races in 2008.

NASCAR INSIDER

Growin' up on (and off) the track

By RICK MINTER
Cox News Service

Can it be that even Kyle Busch is starting to mellow out? The sometimes controversial young driver spent a recent weekend hauling his Late Model car to a track in Georgia, Lanier National Speedway, where he helped out with the mechanical chores, helped the track with publicity then got in the car and put on what amounted to a driving clinic en route to winning the 200-lap affair.

It's a maturing side of Kyle Busch that few outside his close circle ever saw — until recently.

Even members of the media, who haven't been particularly kind to the youngster as he found his place in the sport, are noticing.

One question at a recent press event at Daytona International Speedway, sounded much more like a statement. "Your maturity over the last year and a half has been nothing short of amazing. You've really, really grown up," is the way one veteran writer prefaced his question.

Busch, looking comfortable behind the microphone, simply laughed and responded: "I know. Thanks."

Then he got a little more serious in his responses, giving some of the credit for his development to his manager Jeff Dickerson, who works with him on a daily basis and has helped the young driver better understand the inner workings of the sport.

"It's just been a part of growing up and maturing a little bit, understanding a little bit more about racing, about life, about different things, about sponsors, about what it takes to make this sport go around," Busch said, adding that owning his own team has been an eye-opener.

"Just like Kevin Harvick," Busch said. "He was a bull in a china shop, out of control, too, until he started owning his own team and sort of settled down a little bit."

"Understanding a lot of the business aspects makes you grow up a little faster."

One of Busch's tests going forward is dealing with the likely possibility that he won't win 21 races over three series like he did last year — a phenomenal performance by most anyone's standards.

"That's a challenge," he said. "Probably the biggest challenge I'll have this year is not being as successful as 2008. I would say that five wins in the Cup Series would be good, 10 in the Nationwide and five in the Trucks. ...

"Anything more than that would be great. ... All we can do is try to work our hardest and work our best to try to make sure that that happens."

While Busch may seem more mellow off the track, he's still planning on providing some fireworks on it.

"People always like to say that it's exciting, that they love watching the racing because I'm involved in it," he said. "I don't really want to change that for the sake of the race fans. Maybe the Dale [Earnhardt] Jr. fans want me to change a little bit so I don't wreck their driver as much, but I think the rest of the fan base out there wants to see somebody that makes it exciting."

"Hopefully Tony Stewart this year with his new team can make it exciting, or Carl Edwards, of course. He's always worth some good races, of course, and anybody else out there who wants to get down and dirty and grind up on each other."

Busch's crew chief Steve Addington told reporters on the recent media tour in Charlotte that he's trying to do his part to make sure the No. 18 Cup team doesn't have another drop in performance like they did last year during the Chase, where they were knocked out of title contention by a series of mechanical issues. The team already is working on issues, like braking, that hampered them on the flat tracks like Martinsville and Phoenix last fall. And there have been other efforts, too.

"We came up with some stuff," he said, adding that there's been special emphasis placed on the chassis and engine setups for intermediate tracks. "We've been working on those packages, so I think that we've got a direction to be better than where we ended the season."

Kyle Busch, who claimed a Late Model victory recently at Georgia's Lanier National Speedway, is hoping to duplicate last year's success — without the drop in performance during the Chase.

McMurray staying cool on the hot seat

One of five Roush teams must be cut for '10 season

It was made clear during the recent NASCAR media tour that NASCAR hasn't forgotten the four-car limit placed on car owners. Team owner Jack Roush had five teams when the rules were written, and he must divest himself of one at the end of this year.

Jamie McMurray's team was outperformed by the other four Roush drivers in many races in the middle of last season, so naturally he's somewhat on the hot seat entering this year.

But he told reporters that it's not weighing on his mind all that much.

"We know that NASCAR has asked Jack to cut down to four cars for the 2010 season, but in regards to who it will be is only speculation now," he said. "So until they announce something, I haven't really thought about it, and it's not something that bothers me as we look ahead to this season."

McMurray said he's expecting to race his way off the hot seat.

"I feel more comfortable than ever, and I certainly ran as well as I ever have in my career at the end of last season at a lot of different types of tracks," he said. "I feel that our team is also stronger this year, and everyone that we lost staff-wise, we've replaced them with someone stronger than the people we had in place."

"I just feel that [new crew chief Donnie Wingo] is one of the best crew chiefs in our sport, and we had a lot of success at Ganassi with lesser equipment, so to have Donnie and then all the Ford equipment here at Roush Fenway Racing, I can't wait to see how this all comes together this year."

With a new crew chief in place, Jamie McMurray is confident heading into the 2009 season.

Rick Minter's OBSERVATIONS

Key story lines this week in NASCAR.

Track update

A significant realignment of the schedule for NASCAR's Nationwide and Camping World Truck Series could be just around the corner.

With the announcement last week that Dover Motorsports is selling Memphis Motorsports Park to Gulf Coast Entertainment, the assumption is that the new owners will move Memphis' NASCAR race dates to the company's Alabama Motorsports Park now under construction near Mobile.

The new motorsports park, which includes Dale Earnhardt Jr. among its investors, is expected to include a road course and a 0.7-mile D-shaped oval track and is expected to be operational by 2010.

A statement from Dover Motorsports indicates the $10 million transaction is expected to take place on or about April 30 of this year. Dover Motorsports, which also owns Dover International Speedway, Gateway International Speedway and Nashville Superspeedway, said there are no changes planned for the 2009 season at Memphis.

For now, the track plans to continue operations as scheduled after the closing with the Dover management remaining in place.

In recent years, NASCAR has been hesitant to add races to the schedules of its top touring circuits, so new tracks must obtain race dates from existing facilities.

Memphis currently hosts NASCAR races for the Nationwide and Camping World Truck Series.

There also is uncertainty about the future of another track that hosts Nationwide and Camping World races. The Milwaukee Journal Sentinel is reporting that two potential promoters have decided not to bid on the rights to take over racing at the track.

The paper reports that Dominic and Frank Giuffre, brothers and former racing promoters, met with Wisconsin State Fair officials, but didn't like the price the fair board wanted.

The current promoters, Milwaukee Fair Holdings, have been paying $700,000 a year to use the track but plan to get out of their contract at the end of next year, according to the Sentinel.

Full field expected at Daytona

Any fears about the sagging economy leaving NASCAR short of a full, 43-car field for the Daytona 500 are falling away each day as drivers and teams announce plans to enter the sport's biggest race.

In addition to participating in a significant race, the payoff for the 500 — more than $200,000 to the last-place driver — is enough to entice many to try for a starting berth.

Veteran Geoff Bodine, at age 59, hasn't run a Cup race since 2004, but he'll be in the No. 64 Toyota for Gungelman Motorsports at Daytona. Another Cup veteran, Terry Labonte, also will be at Daytona driving for Prism Motorsports, which is owned by former NASCAR driver Phil Parson and Randy Humphrey.

Jeremy Mayfield also is said to be preparing a car for Daytona. John Andretti appears to have a 500 ride, along with Mike Skinner, Carl Long and Derrike Cope. The hopefuls are pushing the entry list well past 50, but few in the sport expect the numbers to stay that high when the circuit moves to other tracks. The purses will be lower, and if the current economic climate continues, the chances of obtaining additional sponsorship will wane.

Event shifts date, avoids conflict

When Atlanta Motor Speedway was awarded a Sprint Cup race date on Labor Day weekend, it put the race in conflict with the Darlington Historic Racing Festival at Darlington Raceway, which hosted the festival on Labor Day weekend, which once was the date for the track's premier Cup race.

But having two NASCAR events in adjoining states on the same weekend wasn't practical, so Darlington is moving its festival to Sept. 26-27, when the Cup Series will be running at Dover.

For more information on the festival, visit darlingtonraceway.com.

NASCAR veteran Ray Evernham greets fans at the recent Sprint Sound & Speed fan festival in Nashville, Tenn.

New horizons: Evernham looks to next phase of career

By RICK MINTER
Cox News Service

He's driven Modified cars, worked as a mechanic in IROC, been a championship-winning crew chief in NASCAR and a successful team owner.

Now Ray Evernham has decided to move on to the next phase of his life. He's stepping away from an active role at Richard Petty Motorsports, a new team formed from pieces of the old Evernham Motorsports, and tackling new projects in his life. Among them are the ownership of a dirt track, East Lincoln Speedway in North Carolina, an attempt with drag racer Doug Herbert to set a land speed record for piston-engine-powered vehicles and an effort to help young racers get a start in motorsports. He'll continue his work as an ESPN analyst, and he plans to spend more time with his son, Ray J.

"I'm in that same place a lot of people go when they've had a lot of success," he said. "I'm asking myself, 'What's next? How can I make more of a difference?" And I want to enjoy myself a little bit."

"Getting your name on a trophy is great, but at some point, you need to give something back."

RAY EVERNHAM

Evernham, 51, points out that throughout his career, he hasn't stayed in the same job all that long.

Two of his longest stints were as Jeff Gordon's crew chief from 1991 to 1999, when he left to form his own team and lead Dodge back into NASCAR's elite division.

For all of his earlier working life, Evernham's efforts were all about winning races and championships. Now, he said, it's time to do something meaningful and lasting for the sport he loves, a sport that has seen him receive numerous honors including being voted the best crew chief of all time.

"Getting your name on a trophy is great, but at some point, you need to give something back," he said.

His approach to speedway ownership is evidenced by how he initially became involved.

"I went up there one night, didn't tell anybody who I was, paid my way to get in," he said. What he saw were families enjoying an affordable night out and young people working on cars and racing them for the love of the sport.

He said he wants to preserve that, and keep the property from being turned into a subdivision or retail development.

"I don't have some magic formula, and I don't plan on revolutionizing dirt-track racing," he said. "I just want to keep a little track open."

Evernham isn't ruling out anything in the future, but he said that for now the land-speed record pursuit is enough to satisfy his natural urge to compete and be creative.

"Getting involved in this land-speed record project with Doug Herbert has allowed my brain to work again," he said. "I know that at some point, I'm going to have to step back into something that's highly competitive. But I want to make sure I'm rested and refreshed when I do that, because I don't feel like I was using my brain as much as I should have been for the last couple of years."

Evernham is using his newfound free time to pursue his interest in the history of the sport. He's filled a building near Charlotte, N.C., with restored, historic race cars, and he's taking time to learn more about the early days of the sport.

"I've bought a stack of books on the history of the sport, and I've been doing a lot of reading," he said.

For the most part, he says he has no regrets about racing, but there is one "what if" that comes up occasionally. It's about the driver that he turned to when he became a Cup team owner.

"If Bill Elliott and I had gotten together when we were in our 30s, we could have really put some numbers up."

BRIDGE

Bidding quiz

1. Double. Whenever the bidding stops at a low level, the last player to speak — who is said to be in "the balancing position" — may shade his bid somewhat on the assumption that the opponents hold limited strength. In effect, he credits partner with some of the values that are missing and acts in accordance with the type of hand he holds.

2. One notrump. This is an extension of the same principle. Ordinarily, a one-notrump overall promises 15 to 18 points, but when the bid is made in the balancing position, it may be shaded by as many as four or five points. A double would not be proper with this hand because you are not interested in encouraging partner to bid a suit.

3. Three diamonds. In the balancing seat, a jump-overcall shows a strong hand with a strong suit. Here, the jump to three diamonds encourages partner to bid three notrump with a spade stopper and a smattering of other values. You could also double, but it would be dangerous to do so with only a doubleton heart, as partner will assume you have better support for that suit and may insist on playing there. Three diamonds paints a far better picture of your hand.

4. Double. The balancing player sometimes has values with which he would double even if he were not in the protective position. When this occurs, he doubles, as usual, planning to take further action at his next turn to show he was not merely competing for a partscore. With a weaker hand — say, without the ace of clubs — South would simply bid two hearts.

5. Pass. There is no obligation to bid in the balancing seat if you think you can get a better result by passing. In the present case, you have good defense against a spade contract, so there is no good reason to bid.

Against any other suit bid by West, South's high-card values would justify some form of protective action, but here a pass offers the most promising way of showing a profit.

Tomorrow: Priority order.

Whitehead exhibit opens today at Guild

Dalton native Julie Whitehead is Gallery 111's February featured artist of the month. She will be displaying her dyed textiles, scarves, and pillow covers in Gallery 111 today from 5:30 until 7 p.m.

Whitehead attended Savannah College of Art and Design where she earned her bachelor's degree in fiber arts.

Although her focus was on computer-aided textile design, Whitehead continued to explore the creative possibilities silk dyeing holds during and after college.

"I would prefer to stay away from the traditional resist techniques that other silk artists have used for years," said Whitehead. "I like to invent my own ways of producing images on silk fabric utilizing the traditional methods while attaining a different and original look."

Whitehead currently works for the New Patcraft and Designweave as a color stylist and resides in Chattanooga.

The Guild's Main Gallery continues to feature the paintings and collages of Michael Holsomback through Feb. 20. Both exhibits are free and open to the public. Light refreshments will be served.

Customer service expert to speak

Paul Greenberg, internationally known author and an expert on Customer Relationship Management (CRM), will speak at Dalton State College on Tuesday on the topic of "Retaining Customers in an Economic Downturn."

Sponsored by the college's School of Business, the lecture will begin at 12:15 p.m. and is free and open to the public.

Greenberg is president of The 56 Group LLC, an enterprise applications consulting services firm that focuses on CRM strategic services including go-to-market strategies for vendors and integrators and CRM strategic planning and vendor selection. The 56 Group also provides writing, speaking and educational services.

"Paul Greenberg is considered one of CRM's leading authorities on strategy and on the state of the market, and he is a frequent contributor to many national business publications," said Stephen LeMay, associate professor of marketing for DSC. "He writes regularly for publications like CRM Magazine and SearchCRM.com and CRMGuru, and he has spoken as a keynote speaker at conferences in the United States, across Europe, Asia and Australia."

Greenberg's best-selling first book, "CRM at the Speed of Light," was first published in 2001 and has been reproduced in eight languages.

Greenberg is considered one of CRM's leading authorities on strategy and on the state of the market, and is frequently called the "Godfather of CRM." He is also a managing partner of a training company, BPT Partners LLC, and he is the co-chairman of the newly created CRM Research Center at Rutgers University.

Because daytime parking on the Dalton State College campus is limited, attendees are encouraged to park at the Northwest Georgia Trade and Convention Center to take the shuttle bus service to Memorial Hall on the DSC campus. Shuttle buses run continually between the Westcott Administration Building and the Trade Center. Those with questions about the event may call (706) 272-4586.

DEAR ABBY

Ties still bond wife to mom

DEAR ABBY: Five years ago, I married a 40-year-old woman I'll call "Phyllis." We had dated for eight years. My problem is, after all this time Phyllis still has not moved into my home. She has never moved any of her personal belongings in either. And she runs home to her mother's house six days a week.

while praying. DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Protective Lioness" (Dec. 3) and to you, regarding the man who took his 13-year-old son to lunch at a restaurant that features "scantly clad waitresses." You said you wondered what "other indiscretions" he would have his son hide.

When I try to talk to Phyllis about this, she tells me she will bring her "stuff" over, but then she returns to her mother's and nothing changes. Please tell me what to do. — LONELY SPOUSE

Jeane Phillips

DEAR LONELY SPOUSE: It appears your wife is having an unusually hard time severing the umbilical cord with her mother, who may not even be aware that her daughter has a husband. Because you and Phyllis are so far apart on the amount of togetherness it takes to nurture a successful marriage, offer her the option of marriage counseling. If she refuses, you should consult a lawyer.

DEAR ABBY: I have a set of beautiful rosary beads I received after my mother's passing. I brought them to work and put them on to show a co-worker, and I received comments from three different people about how they never saw anyone wear rosary beads as a necklace. They said they weren't sure it was appropriate.

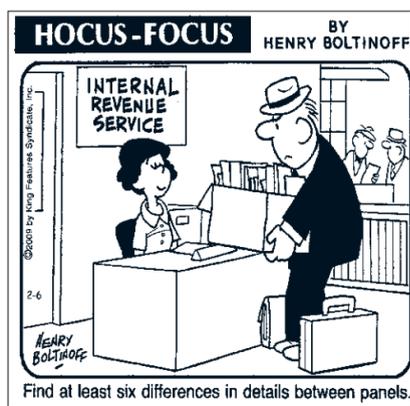

It made me very uncomfortable, so I took the rosary off. Could you find out if it is appropriate to wear rosary beads as a necklace? —

DEAR VAL: While putting the rosary beads on may have made you feel closer to your mother, and your intention was to display them for your co-workers, rosaries are not an item of jewelry, and they are not intended to be worn. Rosary beads are an aid to prayer, meant to move gently through your fingers

"Protective Lioness" doesn't sound so much "protective" as she does insecure. It makes me wonder who she's more upset about seeing the waitress — her son or her spouse? — A MOM IN THE PACIFIC NORTHWEST

DEAR MOM: You're right. I did react strongly to that letter. I viewed the problem through the prism of my own experience. To me the important issue wasn't the amount of flesh that was showing in the restaurant. It was the husband telling his son not to disclose something to his mother. It didn't strike me as off-base that the woman would be upset — not at the choice of restaurants, but at the idea that the father would instruct his son to "take sides" and keep her in the dark.

AUTO RACING: NASCAR

Poor 2009 could push Waltrip into retirement

BY JENNA FRYER
Associated Press Writer

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Michael Waltrip once worked at Wendy's, but quit the fast-food chain after cutting his finger in a tomato slicer.

He later had a job helping his father deliver Pepsi-Cola, but as a loyal Coca-Cola customer, he walked away because he felt as if he were deceiving the customers.

Now Waltrip is at another career crossroad, unsure if its time to climb out of his race car.

The two-time Daytona 500 winner said Thursday he will end his driving career at the end of 2009 if his results don't improve this season.

"I want to race for many more years," he said at media day for the Daytona 500. "I want to race the NAPA car in '10 and beyond, because I'm the best guy for it. But if I notice (teammate) David Reutimann out in front of me and I'm not able to catch him, and if I don't see the results that I think can get the 55 car the results it deserves, then as an owner, I want to get somebody in there that can post those results."

The 45-year-old Waltrip is starting his third season in the dual role of driver and owner of Michael Waltrip Racing, an endeavor he said mentally drained him and affected his on-track performance. He's not won a race since 2003 when he still drove for Dale Earnhardt Inc., and he's had just four top-10 finishes since leaving DEI at the end of the 2005 season to start his own team.

But building from the ground up was an enormous undertaking, and Waltrip had plenty of bumps along the way. He embarrassed himself and new manufacturer Toyota with a cheating scandal during the 2007 Daytona 500, and was later involved in a bizarre incident where he wrecked his personal car and a neighbor saw him climb from the overturned vehicle before walking home through the woods in his socks.

His three-car team was struggling to qualify for races, and sponsorship woes took their toll on the budget. Waltrip eventually took on a partner, Robert Kauffman, a founder of the Fortress Investment Group.

That stabilized the organization, and there were small signs of progress in 2008.

"Because we were so bad, we were the most improved team," he joked. "It's sort of one of those awards you don't want to get."

Waltrip admits the stress was often overwhelming and he nearly snapped when, after an accident at Bristol, Clint Bowyer said over his radio: "Michael Waltrip is the worst driver in NASCAR, period."

NASCAR PHOTO
Michael Waltrip, 45, has found that being a team owner and driver is a mentally draining experience.

Waltrip said he'd reached his breaking point long before that August wreck, but Bowyer's remarks were the final straw.

"The last three years, '06, '07, '08, probably have been the most difficult years ever for me," he said. "And maybe that came to where I wanted to beat somebody up when Clint Bowyer said what he said at Bristol because I didn't deserve that. It just made me mad. The fact that the whole world heard it was probably the hard part."

He and Bowyer have since patched things up, and, its possible the comment was the one thing that spurred Waltrip to turn things around.

A former marathoner, he's returned to running and working out, and thinks he's currently in the best physical shape of his career. He's also not harping on past personal issues, and declined to discuss Thursday the dissolution of his marriage.

But he knows he's in a better place as he prepares for his 25th season.

"I think mentally I am more stable than I've been in a long time," he said. "Mentally, I think I'm back, confident and enthusiastic. I want to do (drive) really bad, and if I don't, I'm going to do something else. That simple."

Waltrip said if he must relinquish his race car, he'll focus on owning MWR and his work as a NASCAR television analyst.

He's asked often if building his own race team was a bad idea, and Waltrip said the jury is still out.

Curing a dog of licking carpets

Q: We have a year-old longhaired dachshund, a spayed female. She has plenty of toys to chew on, but she licks the carpets all over the house. Sometimes she scratches on the rugs as though she is trying to build a nest. That I can understand, but the licking? What do you think?

A: One reason dogs lick objects, including surfaces like your carpet, is because of stress. Excessive licking can be what's called a "stress-induced displacement behavior." It means that this particular dog, in this particular environment with these particular genetics, is having trouble coping with something.

When dogs are in conflict over two seemingly stressful choices, they may choose a third option: the displacement behavior. For example, if you ever punished your dog during house-training by rubbing her nose in the carpet, she may believe you want her to lick the carpet.

Any time she feels a need to relieve herself or get your attention, she may begin the carpet-licking because she is in conflict about what else to do. Behaviors become repetitive if the dog gets any kind of positive outcome, such as your attention, or if the behavior seems to help her escape punishment.

In the dog's mind, it's like he's figured out a safe retreat behavior: "My owner never yells at me or hits me when I lick the carpet."

The trigger could also be some other stress. Possible sources of stress for dogs who check out as healthy by a veterinarian include a lack of sufficient exercise, no clear training, misunderstood punishment and no feeling of control over their environment.

Our guess is that your dachshund may have normal canine confusion that comes from not understanding the dynamics of a human household.

Dogs can also have obsessive-compulsive disorders. Your dog could have an OCD if it is difficult or nearly impossible to interrupt the licking behavior with a toy or treat. Displacement behaviors can become compulsions. The longer a behavior has been present, the more difficult it is to replace it with a more desirable behavior.

Try to change your dog's behavior by using gentle interruptions — no scolding or punishment, because that may increase your dog's anxiety and increase the licking behavior.

If your dog begins licking the carpet, your best bet is to immediately turn your back and leave the room. Teach your dog that chewing or playing with toys results in your positive attention, while licking the carpet results in no attention. Do not be emotional, as dogs read and react to our emotions.

Be aware that if your dog has learned to lick the carpet to capture your attention and you suddenly remove that attention, then your dog's carpet-licking may increase and your dog's anxiety may increase, resulting in new attention-seeking behaviors.

Each dog, like each person, is distinct. You may be doing everything right and this is just who she is. In that case, if she's doing no harm to herself or the carpet, you can simply ignore the behavior. If it has become a problem for you or the dog, ask your veterinarian for a referral to a veterinary behaviorist who can work with you to change your pet's behavior.

Home Health Check

Spot feline health problems early while petting your cat

By Dr. Marty Becker and Gina Spadafori
Universal Press Syndicate

The signs of illness in cats can be particularly subtle, so much so that owners often don't realize their cats are sick until they're really sick — and sometimes that's too late.

To keep your cat healthy, you must be able to recognize what is normal for your pet so you can tell when something isn't right. Changes in appetite, drinking habits, litter-box routines, grooming, and even a change in the sound of your cat's voice can all mean trouble — and should mean a trip to the veterinarian.

Physical changes are important, too. A monthly hands-on examination will help you become aware of changes that could signify something serious.

Before starting a hands-on exam, though, stand back and study your pet for a few minutes. Consider his posture, activity level, gait, coat and overall appearance for an impression of good health. Trouble signs include exposed skin, thin or dry coat, ribs showing, sluggishness, limping or just a lack of "spring" in his step.

Pick up your cat and head for the bathroom scale. Note your weight with your cat, then yours alone. The difference is your cat's weight, and it should be between 8 and 10 pounds. Your cat is normal if a comfortable pad of fat lies over his ribs but you can still feel the ribs if you press your hands in gently. A difference of a pound up or down is fine over the course of a few months — anything more, or rapid weight loss, is reason for concern.

Now for the hands-on part. Here's what to look for:

- Nose. Your cat's nose should be moist and clean, not dry, scabbed or cracked. There should be no discharge or bleeding.

- Eyes. Probably the most beautiful part of any cat, eyes should be bright, moist and clear, centered between the eyelids, with the pupils of equal size. Eyes that are dull or sunken, that appear dry or have thick discharge are not right. Take your cat into a darkened room, and then quickly turn on a light. The pupils should contract quickly, with no difference between them.

- Ears. The skin should be clean, dry, smooth and without wounds. The ear canal should be clean and almost odor-free. Crust, moisture, discharge or strong odor in the ear canal is bad news, as is pain at the touch or an unusual way of holding the head or ears.

Make sure to look for health problems while petting your cat.

"A monthly hands-on examination will help you become aware of changes that could signify something serious."

- The mouth. Your cat's teeth should be clean and white, with gums that are uniformly pink. Press on your pet's gum with your finger or thumb and release quickly. The color will be white but should return to the same color as the surrounding tissue within one or two seconds, a sign your cat's circulatory system is working well. Problem signs here include loose or missing teeth, tartar, or gums that are red, pale, inflamed or sore in appearance.

- Breathing. It should be hard to hear your cat breathe, and his chest wall should move easily in and out as he does. Most of the act of breathing should be performed by the chest wall; the stomach should barely move. "Crackles" or wheezes indicate a problem, as does labored or rapid breathing.

- The abdomen. Start just behind the ribs and gently press your hands into the abdomen. Proceed toward the rear of your pet, passing your hands gently over the abdomen. Some bumps should be there — they're internal organs, such as the kidneys. You should find no other lumps, bumps or masses, though, and your pet should feel no discomfort as you press gently into him.

- Hydration. Check to ensure your cat has enough fluids by pulling the skin just behind his shoulder blades into a tent and then releasing quickly. Your pet's skin should snap immediately back into position. Another good sign of hydration is that the gums just above the teeth are moist when touched.

Chances are your cat will check out fine, in which case your exam should turn into a long, loving petting session. If anything came up that worries you, see your veterinarian to ensure your cat's good health.

Hey! His treat looks better!

Dogs know when they're not getting equal treatment.

- Loyalty may be why we love our dogs, but scientists have found that dogs can display a less appealing attribute: envy. Austrian scientists found that a dog may stop obeying a command if he sees that another dog is getting a better deal. Until now, chimpanzees and some monkeys were the only non-humans to show what is called "inequity aversion" in the absence of a reward. The study used well-trained dogs who offer a paw on command. The researchers put the two dogs side by side but treated them differently, giving one a better reward (sausage) and the other a lesser one (bread) when the paw was given, or giving one dog no reward at all. The quality of the reward made little difference. But in the case in which one dog got no treat at all, that dog became less and less inclined to obey the command.

- Whether the hair on a horse's head curls around clockwise or counterclockwise can tell you whether the animal is right- or left-footed, say researchers in Ireland. Clues to which direction a horse favors could help trainers develop animals who run straighter and maybe even win more races.

- Research involving the use of animals is down by half since the 1970s, according to USA Today. Opponents of animal testing focus on the number of drugs that have tested well in animals but failed in humans (among them, HIV/AIDS vaccine and Vioxx). Proponents point to the drugs or procedures that were discovered, tested and refined in animal trials, including: insulin, vaccines for rabies and polio, skin grafts for burn victims, CAT scans, corneal transplants and heart bypass surgery.

THE SCOOP

Proper handling makes parrots better pets

Parrots are brilliant pets. They learn quickly and respond best to owners who practice consistent, firm handling and gentle training. Punishment is a parrot no-no.

Some guidelines:

- Learn when to leave your bird alone. Birds are emotional and sometimes quite moody, and there are times when it's best just to let them be.

- Control your bird's comings and goings. Instead of opening the cage door to let your pet out, ask your bird to step up onto your hand and then bring him out.

Likewise, give the "step up" command when it's time to put your bird back in his cage. This routine sends a message of leadership to your bird.

- Keep training sessions short and upbeat. Parrots are highly intelligent, but they don't have the longest attention spans. They get bored easily. Several short interactive sessions a day — just a couple of minutes at a time — are better than one or two long ones.

Parrots need to be handled with firm, gentle consistency.

- Don't let your bird ignore a command. If you say "step up," persist until your bird complies or you'll set yourself up for trouble down the road. Birds are very smart, and if they figure a way around you, they'll take it.

ON BEHAVIOR

Show your dog how to be calm

When you are walking your dog and you see something that triggers out-of-control behavior, resist the temptation to yank back on the leash. Instead, set a good example for him.

Do not yell at him to stop. Your agitation only increases his. Be calm: Let out a deep breath, squat down and get him to sit, reinforcing the behavior you want until whatever it is that drives him bonkers passes by.

Talk softly: "Yes, that's a school bus. Gooood sit. Gooood quiet." Being calm provides your dog with emotional leadership. If you begin praising his calm behavior before he blows his top, it will be easier for him to maintain self-control. And eventually, the triggers will no longer fire the behavior you don't want.

NOTICE OF PUBIC HEARING
REGARDING THE DALTON SIGN ORDINANCE
The Dalton-Whitfield County Planning Commission will conduct a public hearing on behalf of the Mayor and Council of Dalton for the review of a new Dalton Sign Ordinance.
The purpose of the hearing will be to accept public comments regarding the proposed new sign ordinance, which is intended to replace the Dalton Sign Ordinance that has been in place and amended since August 1981. The proposed new Dalton Sign Ordinance regulates the sizes, heights, locations, types, and the other pertinent physical features of exterior signs, while simultaneously acknowledging free speech as a First Amendment constitutional right. Balancing the right of individuals to convey their messages through signs, while protecting the right of the public against unrestricted proliferation of signs, is acknowledged as the goal of the City of Dalton. Reasonable regulations also further the policy implementation of the City's adopted comprehensive plan, especially regarding impact on equality land use development in the area.
A full and complete copy of the proposed Dalton Sign Ordinance is available for public review in the office of the City Clerk at Dalton City Hall, 300 West Waugh Street, Dalton, Georgia 30720.
The request for the adoption of a new Dalton Sign Ordinance will be heard by the Dalton-Whitfield County Planning Commission on Monday, February 23, 2009 at 7:00 p.m. at the Whitfield County Administrative Building #2, 214 West King Street, Dalton, Georgia.
Any person having an interest in this matter is hereby given notice to attend and present said interest.
